Introduction and methodology

The Creative Industries in Townsville are currently inadequately defined in terms of the nature of the workforce, as well as the contribution of this sector to the Townsville economy. When initially considering available sources to better understand the workforce and map the economic contribution, it became apparent that readily available data sources would have to be used, given this was a preliminary study designed to identify key issues and opportunities appropriate for a large-scale and major study. While it could have been possible to search the internet for example, this would result in the omission of a number of practitioners working within this sector who do not have an online presence, in addition to the fact that many online sites for Creative practitioners and small-medium enterprises lack detail and are often out of date. A mailing list could also be sought and/or compiled to survey the Creative Industries employees of Townsville; however this and any desktop internet research are major tasks requiring significant resources beyond the scope of this preliminary study. The data sources that were chosen for relative reliability and accessibility were the Yellow Pages and the Australian Bureau of Statistics census data. These data sources would certainly provide some insights into Townsville's Creative Industries sector, yet they represent the tip of the iceberg, with much more to tell beneath the surface. As explained above, a full story requires a major and ongoing study.

At the same time, the Yellow Pages and ABS census data have their own constraints. The Yellow Pages is reliant on customers paying to be included. It is likely other Creative practitioners are working in Townsville yet not included in this source of data. Constraints of the ABS census data include the fact that the free of charge 'table builder' function only allows for 4-digit selection of occupation analysis. If the full version was acquired, data selection at the 6 and 8-digit level would become available, giving more depth and detail about occupations not specified at the 4-digit level. The ABS census data essentially provides the total of Creative Industries workers in Townsville; it does not convey where they are located by either suburb or street address. In addition, while the Yellow Pages does provide street addresses on most occasions, at times there is only a suburb provided.

In order to give a sense of the size of the city, the two most recent censuses reveal that Townsville's population was 154,628 in 2006, growing to 174,461 in 2011, representing 12.8% growth over five years. Thus, it is a small-medium city but one that is steadily increasing in terms of population. In terms of the geographical area included in this study, Townsville's official 'Local Government Area' was selected, involving 10 different postcodes (4810 to 4819). Figure 1 below displays the area in question.

Yellow Pages analysis

The first step was to get an overall sense of the different creative workers in Townsville, which includes those involved in the core creative arts, other core creative practices, wider and related cultural industries, based on the concept developed by David Throsby (2008)¹. Initially the numbers of companies/people were counted in their occupation group which enabled a very basic distribution of Creative Industries within Townsville. The data was gathered and entered into an excel spread sheet, under the following headings: company name, occupation, street address, suburb, and post code. There were over 360 entries which were then plotted on Google Earth (see Appendix 1 for a full list of these practitioners). The plotting on Google Earth is displayed as Figure 2 below:

The data in Figure 2 reveals the fact that, in general, Creative Industries are generally widely spread across Townsville. While there is some level of increased presence in certain areas (e.g. CBD), there is no overwhelming ‘hot spot’ of activity. This represents, to some degree, ¹See Throsby, D. (2008). The concentric circles model of the cultural Industries, Cultural Trends, 17(3), 147-164.

a potential issue for investigation, given ‘clusters’ or hot spots might lead to advantages for creative workers and clients.

In order to further visualise the Creative Industries in terms of where they are located within suburbs, the following figure was developed using GIS mapping, based on the same data from the Yellow Pages. See Figure 3 below.

Figure 3 illustrates that while relatively widespread across Townsville, there is some increased level of activity in the city area (46), Kirwan (30), Garbutt (26), and Aitkenvale (23). There is certainly no clustering of services in and around the city centre for example, an issue of interest for follow-up research and investigation.

ABS Census Data

The Australian bureau of statistics (ABS) data was constructed through defining occupations in the Creative Industries; the ABS defines its occupations through the Australian and New Zealand Standard Classification of Occupations (ANZSCO). The ABS census data for 2006 and 2011 contained a number of Creative Industries workers operating in Townsville. These were firstly determined as individual occupation areas for each of 2006-11, after which they were aggregated using the concentric circles model and concept put forward by David Throsby (2008).

A further limitation of the ABS Census Data

Prior to discussing the ABS census data that was gathered in this study, an additional limitation needs to be presented, namely any 4-digit ABS census analysis fails to convey data if the numerical value of the occupation group is less than 3. While a zero would typically appear, the display of this data is randomized, so an initial search for an art occupation may show a zero, while the second time it may display a one for example. Thus, very low numbers should be viewed on this basis.

Nevertheless, the following table presents the Creative occupations listed in the ABS census data in both 2006 and 2011. The occupations are grouped according to whether they are part of the core creative arts, other core, wider and related cultural industries. The change in volume across 2006 to 2011 is presented and also displayed as a percentage. The table includes some occupations with a 'not further defined' (nfd) code, this meaning a respondent to the Census survey has given incomplete occupation information, although enough to allow coding to a general occupation. See Table 1 below.

In order to view this change in the Creative Industries sector in Townsville another way, and prior to discussing key aspects of the table, Figure 4 below displays the broad creative occupation areas from Table 1 via the concentric circle model, as originally developed by Throsby (2008). See Figure 4.

The data in both Table 1 and Figure 4 enables the following general comments to be made about Townsville's creative industries sector from 2006 to 2011:

- Overall, the Creative Industries sector – as a percentage of the total Townsville workforce – has declined slightly over the 5-year period, most likely as a result of significant growth in other areas of the workforce such as in mining;
- Commercially oriented creative workers represent the majority of the sector, rather than traditional artists in the core creative arts;
- While there is overall growth in Townsville's Creative Industries across the 5-year period, three of the four sectors in fact declined during this time, with the 'wider cultural industries' the only area to grow significantly;
- Some occupations show significant decline or growth, although these figures should thus be read in context, given they often involve a low starting base; and
- There does appear to be evidence of the decline of some occupations due to ongoing conversion to digital practices, such as the reduction in the number of photographic developers/printers, printers and printing assistants and table workers.

In order to consider the nature of the Townsville Creative Industries sector in a wider context, the data presentation method developed in Table 1 was applied to national Creative Industries occupations (see Table 2 below).

The data in Table 2 above reveals that employment in the Creative Industries across the nation has increased over the period 2006-11. That is, the core creative arts sector grew by 1%, other core cultural by 4%, wider cultural industries by 8% and related industries by 14%. It is interesting that the Creative Industries sector grew faster than the workforce in general. The data also reveal that Townsville's Creative Industries workforce lags behind the national average both in terms of share in overall workforce and growth rate indicating no evidence of catching up, although this needs to be explored in more depth and via research before any definitive claims can be made, given the potential limitations of the ABS and Yellow Pages data available at the time of this analysis.

Age of the Creative Industries workforce

In order to consider the age of the creative workforce in Townsville, ages in brackets were captured from the ABS data. See Table 3 which shows the ages within 10-year brackets and across the 2006-11 period.

Table 3. An analysis of the ages of the Creative Industries workers in Townsville across 2006 and 2011

Age by 10 Year Age Groups (AGEP)	10-19 years	20-29 years	30-39 years	40-49 years	50-59 years	60-69 years	70-79 years
Total 2006	65	451	521	505	324	87	10
Total 2011	31	518	522	508	320	140	9
Percentage Change	-52%	15%	0%	1%	-1%	61%	-10%

Table 3 above reveals two key changes from 2006-11, with a significant reduction (-52%) in the youngest bracket as well as a considerable increase in the 60-69 bracket (61%). These findings are interesting and worthy of further exploration in a major study. For example, are there more young people engaging in tertiary study thus not entering the workforce when finishing school? Are more workers approaching retirement looking for a career change and heading to creative practice? Or, are mature age creative workers staying in employment longer?

In order to consider how these age brackets contribute to the total Creative Industries workforce in Townsville, Figure 5 graphs these as percentages and across 2006 and 2011.

As expected, the majority of the workforce is within the 20-50 age bracket, the period where most of the population are engaged in employment, although there has been a slight increase in the contribution of the 20-29 year old group during the period in question.

Employment modes of the Creative Industries workforce

In order to consider the nature of employment, data was gathered identifying whether the Creative Industries workers were employed 'away from work', 'part-time' or 'full-time'. See Table 4 below, noting "Employed, away from work" refers to those who stated that they were working but who did not state the number of hours worked.

Table 4. Employment modes of the Creative Industries workforce in Townsville across 2006 and 2011

Labour Force Status	Employed, away from work	Employed, worked part-time	Employed, worked full-time
Total 2006	95	321	1547
Total 2011	84	327	1637
Percentage Change	-12%	2%	6%

Table 4 reveals that, overall there was a slight increase in full-time employment, although again this would need to be explored in more detail in a major study to gain a greater set of insights into any change across the different modes of employment in the sector. Certainly, it is positive that the majority of workers are full-time, given the Creative Industries is typically characterised by part-time, project and/or freelance work patterns.

Gender of the Creative Industries workforce

In order to give an insight into the gender of the Creative Industries workers, Table 5 presents the ABS data from 2006 and 2011.

Table 5. Total Gender in Townsville: 2006 and 2011

Gender Totals	Female	Male
Total 2006	696	1267
Total 2011	794	1254
Percentage change	14%	-1%

While males continue to represent the majority of the workforce, the increase in the number of female workers across the period is significant, another finding worthy of further research and exploration.

Level of education of the Creative Industries workforce

Figure 6 reveals the fact that, in general, at least 50% Creative Industries workers have undertaken some form of post-school learning and training. In addition, this number has slightly increased over the 5-year period, given the increase in the number of workers with a University qualification.

Income generated by Creative Industries workers

It is positive that there is, on average, growth in the income of Townsville’s workers over the 5-year period 2006-11. However there is still a lag behind the national average which is potentially a significant concern. This gap however needs to be explored in more depth, for example, it may relate to cost of living factors, educational attainment, supply/demand or other issues.

Workplace and Residency of the Creative Industries workforce

In order to consider where the Creative Industries employees live and work, Tables 6 and 7 present this data, with Table 6 showing that for Creative Industries workers only, and Table 7 showing the entire workforce in Townsville in order to explore any differences. The yellow shaded diagonal reveals the percentage share of the workforce residing in a postcode, that work in the same postcode. The horizontal postcodes represent place of work, with the vertical representing place of residency.

When considering the yellow diagonals in Tables 6 and 7, in Table 6 it is higher than the broader workforce, thus more creative workers live and work in the same postcode. This is possibly a reflection of the fact that many Creative Industries workers run a business from home, although this also requires further investigation and research.

Concluding remarks

This preliminary study is very much a brief and early snapshot view of the Creative Industries sector in Townsville; it was always intended to be preliminary in nature and a starting point in terms of attempting to map a sector which is not easily defined or illustrated in publically available data. Further, the economic contribution of the sector to the Townsville economy was not specifically identified in this first phase, given publically available data did not define or quantify this. In terms of overall findings, it must firstly be stated that the limitations of the available data mean that any claims are tentative and require significant further research to validate or understand them better. Nevertheless, the following general points can be made in relation to Townsville's Creative Industries:

- There is a relatively even distribution of Creative Industries across Townsville, although there is an increased level of activity in the city centre;
- The Creative Industries sector has shown slight growth in terms of total employment across 2006-11, although this lags behind the growth of the total Townsville workforce as well as the national Creative Industries sector and total workforce;
- Some sub-sectors of the Creative Industries in Townsville have in fact declined during the period 2006-11;
- Creative Industries workers in Townsville earn less income (on average) than those nationally, although the average weekly income has increased across 2006-11;
- While males dominate the Creative Industries in Townsville, there has been significant growth in the number of female workers in the sector across 2006-11; and
- Many Creative Industries workers appear to live and work in the same postcode, suggesting many run a business from home.

Ultimately, these findings reveal the fact that there is a need for significant further research in order to explore these issues in depth, as outlined further below.

Future Research

This preliminary study has revealed a number of future research opportunities and which are necessary to create a fuller picture of the nature and contribution of the Creative Industries to Townsville's economy, including:

- A more indepth geographical analysis of the locations of creative workers and industries in Townsville, through a more advanced GIS mapping and spatial analysis;
- A detailed investigation of the 'supply' side of the Creative Industries sector in Townsville, namely who are the workers and what services do they provide, thereby providing a sense of what is and isn't available in Townsville as well as the nature of the contribution to the Townsville economy;

- A detailed investigation of the ‘demand’ for creative services in Townsville from non-creative businesses, organisations and companies, including a quantification of what potential work and income is lost from Townsville to other locations and workers;
- Research into the potential for clustering and partnering within the Creative Industries in Townsville as well as opportunities for cross-sector projects and developmental opportunities; and
- Further investigation into the potential for physical clustering of further Creative Industries workers in the City centre, in order to further build capacity and contribution to the Townsville economy.

This further research would not only offer a range of detailed insights into the creative sector of Townsville, but it would enable the identification of a range of ways to foster and build the Creative Industries in this city.
